Audit findings

- High proportions of funds were used for renewal and construction of water reservoirs at the expense of other measures. State organisations then fall short of realising the actions that are unattractive to other applicants, such as riverside revitalisation.

- The Programme for the Revitalisation of River Systems was not systematically evaluated from the material perspective (or in terms of its benefits).
Audit findings

• Some parts of the non-investment Landscape Care Programme lack specific goals and indicators and the benefit has never been evaluated.

• The target values of some of the operational programme Environment indicators had been set so low that these have already either been met or exceeded many times over. Therefore, they cannot fully be used to evaluate the programme’s success.
